

Who can enter?

- Troops may enter more than one patrol.
- A patrol consists of a minimum of 4 and a maximum of 8 Scouts.
- No team member is to be aged over 14.
- A maximum per team of 1 PL and 2 APL's or 2 PL's and 1 APL.

If you do not have enough Scouts please enter those that wish to attend anyway as we can make up some composite teams. You must notify Richard of how many Scouts and Patrols you are entering at least a week BEFORE the event.

What do they need?

All meals are provided (except for packed lunch on Saturday) so no cooking gear is needed. Patrols will need their own tentage and basic camping gear. They will need standard personal equipment expected of a Scout which includes a tea towel, cup, plate, bowl, knife, fork and spoon. They must arrive and depart in the full uniform they normally wear at their troop.

Every person will contribute £10 to cover their camping fees and food for the weekend.

Leaders will need to ensure they have their own home contact arranged, details of which must be handed to the organising team at the start of the weekend. Each Scout must complete and return the official B&D Nights Away Scheme forms.

Notes

Times and events are a rough outline and may be changed at the organising teams discretion.

When patrols are in a testing or training session they must remain on site unless they have permission from one of the organising team.

Patrols that do not return in time for a testing or training session may be penalised points.

How does it all work?

The Scout Rally will run on a trading post basis. Each patrol will be briefed at the start of the weekend. During the course of the weekend there will be several bases running. Patrols will need to ensure that they visit each base and complete the task set. There will be a variety of tasks to complete, some easier than others, all of which will contribute varying points to their overall score.

Points are awarded for their skill at the task, teamwork, behaviour, effort and quality of the work. Points may be deducted for poor performance, behaviour or not behaving according to the Scout Law at ANY time over the weekend.
